Jury comments

Very important focus on youth mental health and culture; strong innovative, participative aspect.

Long lasting projects, good practises can be shared. Project assumes the involvement of young adults and culture creators from the beginning like mentoring programs to strengthen and empowerment the network of local activists. Evaluation tools on each level. Great approach!

The diagnosis of shocks, stresses and challenges is very thorough . The organisation structure is impressive and planned actions are very well thought through and promising a longlasting impact. There are some minor mistakes in placing some descriptions not correctly in the structure of the action plan. The cultural tools chosen for the plan are showing good understanding of the culture's role in building individual and social resilience. Good added aspect of the proposed action would be including transgenerational dimension - as you mention in your diagnosis there is a gap between elderly volunteers and young generation. You can also use chosen cultural tools to engage younger groups in co-creation of ideas and solutions to the diagnosed shocks and stresses that they choose as the most meaningful to their future.

Excellent description and great ideas. Although one might consider, whether the town really needs support from the outside, there is no doubt that Svendborg can inspire many others and also get inspired by sharing across borders.

An excellent application, strongly aligned to strategic objectives and actions that are clearly thought out.

Excellent! Participatory planning with the youth.

Clear target groups and objectives. Very timely and relevant focus on young people with mental health issues; this should also lead to increased cooperation with the health and social inclusion sectors at local level.

I evaluate the project very positively. Professionalism visible in a detailed schedule of activities and financial matters is extremely valuable. However, it is worth thinking about whether there are any forms of international cooperation, for example with other Cultural Pearls, that you would like to undertake in BSR.

The three parts of the projects should be more integrated in order to strengthen the impact. Culture creators also need more work and conceptualization in order to be attractive to young people.

Very relevant approach -especially in the aftermath of the Pandemic.
